AIMS AND SCOPE

Congenital Anomalies is the official Journal of the Japanese Teratology Society. The object of the Journal is to promote research on developmental abnormalities and propagate knowledge concerning this problem as a contribution to human welfare. Congenital Anomalies publishes reports of studies in any area of abnormal development and related fields. The Journal aims to promote the broad exchange of novel results in research and encourages authors from all countries to submit papers. Although contributions by members of teratology societies affiliated with The International Federation of Teratology Societies (IFTS) are given priority, contributions from non-members are also welcomed.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Manuscripts and related correspondence should be sent to: Professor Yuji Nakajima, Editor-in-Chief, Congenital Anomalies, c/o Department of Anatomy and Cell Biology, Graduate School of Medicine, Osaka City University, 1-4-3 Asahimachi, Abenoku, Osaka, 545-8585, Japan (phone: +81-6-6645-3706; fax: +81-6-6646-3603; email: cga@ac-square.co.jp)

For details concerning the submission of papers to Congenital Anomalies, see the Author Guidelines at the Journal website.

BUSINESS CORRESPONDENCE

All matters relating to membership of the Society should be sent to: Dr. Hiroki Otani, President, The Japanese Teratology Society, c/o Department of Developmental Biology, Faculty of Medicine, Shimane University, Izumo 693-8501, Shimane, Japan (phone: +81 853 20 2102; fax: +81 853 20 2100; email: anatomy1@med.shimane-u.ac.jp)

COVER OF THIS ISSUE
